B1.1

Master Skills is a six-book series designed for young adults and adult learners of English who want to develop and master essential language skills. Combining reading, writing, listening, and speaking in a single integrated series, it follows the latest learning approaches to provide a balanced and effective learning experience. Each book includes ten units, with two sub-modules in every unit, allowing learners to focus on specific sub-skills in a structured way. Throughout the series, learners are supported with a variety of master tips, as well as rich visual and auditory input to enhance both comprehension and fluency. The series is fully aligned with the requirements of the Common European Framework of Reference.

This instructional framework is designed to help educators transition students from basic language acquisition to applied, academic communication. By integrating the series' core features with intentional Critical Thinking (CT) and structured writing practices, instructors can create a rigorous, balanced learning experience.

1. Embedded Critical Thinking (CT) Integration

The series integrates reading, writing, listening, and speaking. To elevate this for academic readiness, CT should be actively embedded into the "Master Tips" and input materials.

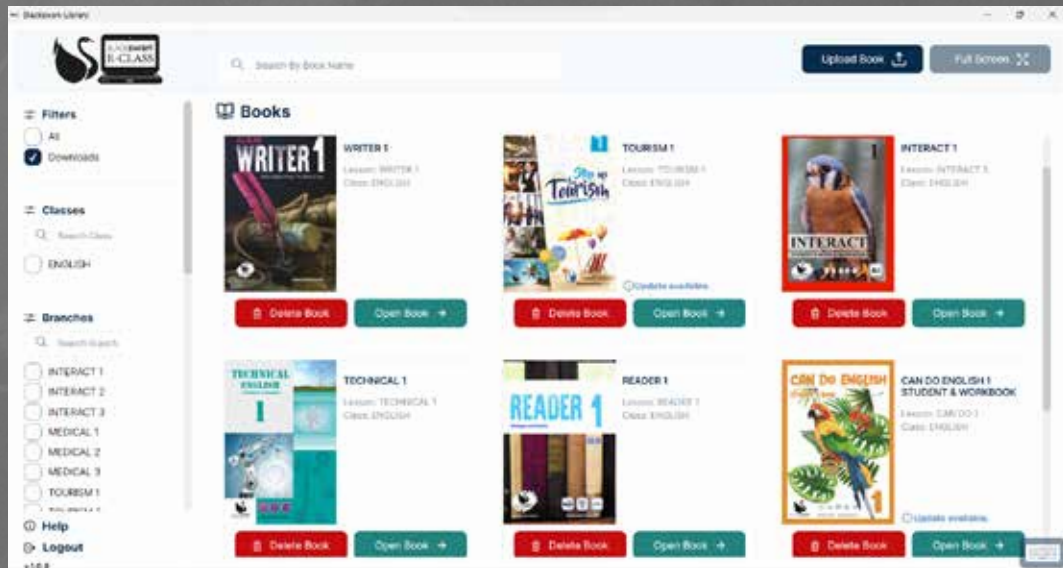

- * Active Reading & Listening Analysis: Move beyond basic comprehension questions (e.g., "What happened?"). Use the rich visual and auditory inputs in the Audio App and textbook to prompt analytical thinking:
- * Evaluation: "Why do you think the author/speaker chose this specific example?"
- * Inference: "Based on the dialogue, what can we infer about the cultural context?"
- * Structured Debate & Speaking: Utilize the speaking modules to build argumentation skills. Require students to support their opinions with evidence pulled directly from the reading or listening texts in the unit.
- * Visual Literacy: The series emphasizes rich visual input. Have students critically analyze the images, charts, or infographics before reading the text. Ask: "What bias or perspective does this image present?"

2. Academic Writing Embedded Practice

Since the series spans A1.1 to B1.2, writing instruction must be carefully scaffolded. Use the 10-unit structure to progressively build academic writing endurance.

Speaking is one of the most important skills learners must master as it helps to communicate with others and express thoughts and feelings.

Unlike in receptive skills which require learners to make meaning from language input which they are exposed to, in speaking skill, learners must actually create meaning and produce their own language. The major aim of this series is to help learners improve their speaking skill by producing spoken language.
